Dan Heffley

The medical community and HMO's are not up to speed with regard to rehabilitation of stroke victims. Only recently have therapies once considered ad hoc have become accepted. The HMO's have to underwrite therapy and the best they can do is 24 therapy sessions per year. Including home therapy, Dan does more than 15 sessions per week - none of which are paid for by insurance. The primary focus is speech pathology and Dan goes to Duquesne University and the VA Hospital six times per week for that treatment alone.

The money raised through the annual golf outing underwrites the speech therapy along with Hyperbaric Oxygen, Transcranial Micro-current Biofeedback, Auditory Integrative Therapy in addition to others. We are constantly introducing new therapies and revisiting old ones. We lose skills if we don't make an effort to stay active. So it is with a stroke victim only more so. Regression is much faster than progress. Dan constantly pushes himself. He doesn't let up and never gives up.
